and the Universidad Autónoma de Nuevo León, the goal is to maintain and enhance the services offered by urban parks.

Marisol Park was the first such space in which restoration works begun, including the infrastructure to harvest and regulate rainwater for gardens, for incoming water and slopes, and for reforestation with native trees and bushes.

The park will offer valuable environmental services and recreational areas for its neighbors and students at nearby schools as part of a system that interconnects urban green spaces, which is promoted by the municipal government.

These actions confirm Arca Continental's commitment to improving living conditions in the communities where it operates and are just one of its several initiatives to recover public spaces aimed at strengthening the social fabric.
